

For more than a century, the Manchester Museum has been providing the people of our city with an insight into the natural history of our world whilst championing the appreciation and conservation of nature.

This proud tradition was continued recently with their partnership on the Green Fix project so we felt it only fitting, especially during the International Year of Biodiversity, that we had a section here on Wildabout Manchester for regular updates from the Museum.

This section of the site will be regularly updated with new stories and major events from so check back regularly!

Alternatively, why not go to their official site and see what new events and activities will be coming up over the next few months?
