

The Greater Manchester Local Record Centre are providing an amazing resource that will let members of the public log and track sightings of any wildlife or unique plant species that they might see.

So, whether you have seen a fox in your garden, a kestrel hunting near the roadside or a unique flower growing naturally in your garden, let them know and it will be added to a massive biodiversity database!

The importance of this work cannot be understated as it allows us to track the variety of species within the city and beyond and how habitats may be changing over time.

Click here to access the site and let them know what you've seen!