

The Tree Strategy was developed in response to community interest about how trees are managed across Manchester. It is the result of extensive stakeholder engagement with businesses, charities, public sector agencies community and special interest groups from across the City.

The Tree Strategy is one of a range of environmental strategies adopted by Manchester. These strategies provide the Council with a framework to manage its operations and protect the city's environment. More importantly the strategies set out expectations for the city, expectations that can be adopted by other agencies and the private sector as well as providing the bedrock for the development of policies such as the Local Development Framework.
